Upon further review, Takemori et al is maintained as applicable prior art.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 41-60 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Takemori et al.

Takemori et al disclose a foodstuff containing xylitol, whey protein, and a soluble dietary fiber (see entire patent and the claims, especially claims 1, 2 and 13).

The claims differ as to the specific amounts and the specific utilization.

The prior art teaches the use of xylitol, whey protein, and fiber/stabilizer as conventional in the art.

Once the art recognizes the use of a given component for a specific function then the use and manipulation of this component would be no more than optimization, see In re Boesch 205 USPQ 215.

Applicant is using known components for their art-recognized function to obtain expected results.

It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art, at the time the invention was made, to use the claimed component amounts in a baked product because the prior art teaches the conventional use of the claimed components in a baked product.

Attention is invited to In re Levin, 84 USPQ 232 and the cases cited therein, which are considered in point in the fact situation of the instant case, and wherein the Court stated on page 234 as follows:

This court has taken the position that new recipes or formulas for cooking food which involve the addition or elimination of common ingredients, or for treating them in ways which differ from the former practice, do not amount to invention, merely because it is not disclosed that, in the constantly developing art of preparing food, no one else ever did the particular thing upon which the applicant asserts his right to a patent. In all such cases, there is nothing patentable unless the applicant by a proper showing further establishes a coaction or cooperative relationship between the selected ingredients which produces a new, unexpected, and useful function. In re Benjamin D. White, 17 C.C.P.A. (Patents) 956, 39 F.2d 974, 5 USPQ 267; In re Mason et al., 33 C.C.P.A. (Patents) 1144, 156 F.2d 189, 70 USPQ 221.

Applicant's arguments filed December 10, 2004 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant argues that the prior art does not teach a gluten and sugar free product.

Takemori et al clearly teach a composition containing xylitol, whey protein, and a soluble dietary fiber. Applicant does not specifically claim a sugar and gluten free product. Applicant merely recites in the preamble that the composition may be used to produce a sugar-free product.

It is also noted that Applicant refers to commercial success and long-felt need.

The declarations under 37 CFR 1.132 filed December 10, 2004 is insufficient to overcome the rejection of claims 41-60 based upon Takemori et al for the following reasons.

- 1) It is not clear from the declarations that the product marketed is commensurate in scope with the claimed invention.
- 2) It is not clear whether the consumer was free to choose on the basis of objective principals. Specifically, the use of Applicant's invention is heavily promoted in national bestseller books.

McCabe (US Patent Nos. 6827955 and 6830766) are cited as of interest.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
